TROTTERS STEP ASIDE FOR GALLOPING CLAN

By J. W. MARCHBANK

Observation at the fairs has shown great interest has been maintained in the trotters and pacers, as was the case last year, and no wonder, as "class" animals, such as Peter F. J., have a way of going that cannot but thrill even the dyed-in-the-wool followers of the runner. With a clever man in the sulky, it is worth going miles to witness a performance by topnotchers of the harness brigade. The trotters and pacers come from all parts of the country and make up for the lack of quality among the gallopers.

When little black Direct electrified crowds at the Oakland track across the bay some years ago the harness horses were an important part of the program, even though there were better thoroughbreds taking part in their part of the show than in late years at the fairs. Direct was a trotter and a good one and later on was converted into a pacer, at which artificial gait he won even wider fame. Stamboul was also a big favorite among the performers between the thills.

Senator Stanford did a remarkable thing in speeding up the trotters by the liberal employment of thoroughbred blood among the standardbreds down at Palo Alto. Messenger, foundation sire of the trotting breed, was foaled as long ago as 1780 and much skepticism as to whether or not a type so long established could stand the infusion, even of thoroughbred blood, from which it sprang, at a late date. Colts and fillies, with thoroughbred blood close up, were inclined to break often, but the theory worked out satisfactorily enough and probably many of the records of modern times are due to the radical experimentation of the Palo Alto breeder.

Thoroughbreds come into their own at Tanforan after the lay-off since last spring on Saturday of next week. Tanforan is a mile oval, with a resilient cushion for the runners, and it is no wild guess the meeting will be one of the best in the long series at the pioneer course at San Bruno.

NEW SCHOOLS MAKE PROGRESS

View of New Jefferson School

The progress of construction of the three new school buildings is a matter of keen interest to everyone. The latest reports furnished by District Superintendent R. L. Crane, Jr., are that the foundations are complete on all three jobs, with the Jefferson and Woodrow Wilson Schools entirely framed and the roofs partially finished. Crocker is now being framed.

The Jefferson School has the first coat of plaster and the Woodrow Wilson School ready for lathing.

Work on the Crocker School had been delayed for several weeks. This delay was caused by the shortage of large timbers, which are used for the foundation construction and which could not be obtained because of the lumber strike that prevailed in the North, thus curtailing the shipment of any lumber that had been consigned to the job. These conditions no longer exist, and it is expected that the school will be completed at the designated time.

The picture above is a likeness of the Jefferson School. With the conconstruction of these new buildings a new asset is added to the community as well as to the Jefferson School District. Built with the newest ideas of school house planning, we should feel very proud that these buildings bring about such an improvement in the standards of civic buildings of the community. These new structures will be comparable to those of any larger school organization and it is quite certain that the people will be well pleased to have their children attend these fine schools.

CITY FATHERS HAVE STRENUOUS SESSION

Largest Number of Citizens Attend Council Meeting For Many Months

On Monday evening of this week the City Council of Daly City met at the city hall with all members present.

The largest concourse of citizens to attend a council meeting for many months appeared at the session.

Property owners of the district affected requested the council, by petition, to install in those portions of Miriam street, San Diego avenue, Woodrow street and Citrus avenue, lying in the Metropolis Homestead Tract, improvements similar in character to those in other portions of the city having permanent improvements.

The matter was referred to the city engineer for report.

Bids were read offering premium amounts for city liability insurance, other than on automobiles, in various sums. The matter was laid over until an adjourned meeting, Monday of next week.

A communication from the city of Santa Clara requested a copy of any city ordinances dealing with wholesalers. Mayor Smith stated the only ordinance of that nature in existence was one dealing with the business of vehicle sales.

A communication from Fire Company No. 6 announced the opening of the new fire house on Saturday of last week.

The management of the San Mateo County Products and Floral Fiesta asked permission to stretch a sign across Hillcrest drive at Mission street. Referred to Superintendent of Streets Bodien.

A communication from the Colma Vista Grande Aerie of Eagles urged the council to enter a float in the Floral Fiesta parade, Saturday, October 12. Superintendent Bodien stated Daly City would be represented by a float from the City Water System. The council referred the matter to Messrs. Bodien and Kosta and authorized them to expend not to exceed $50 in its construction.

The American Legion asked establishment of a uniform call for emergency mobilization in case of extreme disaster. The letter suggested that the signal be ten blasts on the fire siren, repeated two times. The council ordered a letter of thanks transmitted to the Legion and placed the matter in the hands of Fire Chief Chesney for action.

American Legion Post No. 410 invited the members of the council to attend installation of officers at the Legion Hall on Wednesday evening of this week. Invitation was accepted.

Messrs. O'Connor and Atkisson, of the Golden State Theater Circuit, appeared and voiced protest against the issuance of a permit to conduct any Bingo establishment in Daly City.

The registration list for that portion of Colma recently annexed to Daly City, as submitted by the county clerk, was ordered transmitted as cor-

HEATHER BABIES GIVEN TRIALS AT NEAR-BY COURSE

Marchbank Colts and Fillies Show They Have "Foot" As Well As Handsome Conformation.

Preparatory to shipment back to their foaling place, a band of yearlings delighted their owner, J. W. Marchbank, early Wednesday morning at Tanforan by exhibitions of promising form. There are eight colts and eight fillies in the "crop" from Heather Farm this time and expert opinion is to the effect they are the best lookers ever bred at the haras across the bay.

After being taken up in the summer tests are always in order by large establishments at this period of the year. The youngsters must show they possess a high turn of speed that will make them valuable in the racing to begin for them the following year. In the trials a year ago Maid of Perth was the "pick" of her owner as a "stand-out" and that his judgment was of the best was demonstrated by the "Maid" going on to three wins in three starts against the fleetest colts and fillies of the country at Santa Anita and Bay Meadows.

There's a half brother to Maid of Perth in the yearling band, a bay of pleasing lines, a full sister to Lady Florise, a half brother to Orra, a half sister to Kootenay Belle and other relatives to fast ones that have earned brackets for the Marchbank stable on the big tracks of the country. There is not a chestnut in the lot. Lady Julian's daughter (sister to Lady Florise) is a black that has all the indications of being a real runner.

Seven of the yearlings have the inbred St. Simon horse Xenofol as Sire and they will be the first by that promising stallion to carry the Marchbank silks in struggles out on the racing oval. Hopes are strong in the breast of the proud owner of Xenofol that the "X" thoroughbred will turn out many stakes victors.

MODERN MIRACLES IS SUNDAY SERMON

Is the age of miracles past? Where has God gone? Why are the Churches dying? The pastor of Grace Presbyterian Church is far from admitting that this is so. On Sunday morning at 11 o'clock he will tell what the greatest modern miracle is. In the evening a Hymn singing Gospel service will commence at 7 o'clock to which the youth of the community are invited.

RICH FARMER GOES HIGHBROW

Sterling Comedy Of Sudden Wealth Is Shown On Local Screen

"Going Highbrow," the Warner Bros. comedy, based on the riotous play by Ralph Spence, will be at the Daly City Theater Sunday and Monday, September 29 and 30.

The story involves the rise of a poor mid-west farmer who suddenly gains riches, and his wife, who goes highbrow and tries to break into society.

The wife engages a high powered publicity agent, who agrees to put them across through the sponsorship of an impoverished aristocratic family for a big fee.

Guy Kibbee and Zasu Pitts play the stellar roles of the farmer and his ambitious wife, which are the leading comedy parts. Edward Everett Horton appears as the blundering promotion manager, while Ross Alexander and June Martel have the romantic roles.

Special music and lyrics were written for the picture by Louis Alter and John Scholl. Robert Florey directed from the screen play by Edward Kaufman and Sy Bartlett.

On the same program is "Orchids to You," with John Boles and Jean Muir.

Amateur Night, Sunday.

NEW GIRL IN TOWN

Mr. and Mrs. M. Clark of Brunswick street are receiving congratulations of friends on the birth of a seven pound daughter Friday morning of last week at St. Lukes Hospital.

Mrs. Clark formerly was Miss Margaret Sims and is a popular teacher at the General Pershing School.

BOYS AND GIRLS!

Just listen to this. How would you like to write a Christmas story? If you attend the Public or Parochial schools of Daly City and are in any of the grades from fifth to eighth, inclusive, you may start in right now to select the subject for your story. There are so many interesting things happening at the holiday season or if you have a vivid imagination, you can think of something exciting which if well written, will make a story that others will enjoy reading.

Your teacher will conduct this contest, so have your thoughts all ready to begin. The ten best stories will be selected from each school entering the contest. There will be a first, second and third prize for the three best in each school.

"How about the seven in each school that don't get first, second or third prize, aren't they going to get anything at all?" someone asks.

This question will be answered next week. You may be sure the prizes will all be worth working for.

And remember, story writers, your compositions will be judged for originality and neatness—of course, too, they must be interesting and mustn't run over two hundred and fifty words.

UNANIMITY PREVAILS IN RANKS OF LIBERALS

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work

There is a music in the affairs of men which one may take one's part in or which one may spoil.—Plato.

When thoughts, almost identical in their general significance, are coursing through the minds of liberals on both sides of our northern border, it must be that whatever social changes are in the offing will be just about the same in Canada and in this country. Fulminations of the hysterical Fascist anti-Roosevelt press, as the San Francisco News truly denominates certain newspapers, have no effect on far-sighted citizens working out patiently the advance necessitated by a machine age.

The President is a realist and right now he is busily engaged in an endeavor to lead men out of a wilderness in which we have been wandering. The chief executive not only thinks of hand-workers, but of brain-workers the "white collar class," as it is sometimes called.

Artists, musicians, writers and actors are going to be given a lift. We heartily agree with the Vancouver Sun when it says:

There are still many millions of years of work to be done that cannot and will not be accomplished by machines. The new technology means the translation of men from ditches to laboratories, from weary drudgery to the brush and palette, from the labors of the hands to the labors of the mind, from the records of the time-clocks to the records of philosophic thought.

There could be no better way to start the movement away from the hands to the brain than by a comprehensive plan restoring unemployed men accustomed to mental pursuits to their congenial tasks.

The Works Progress Administration has announced $27,315,217 will be expended to give employment for the next six months to about 26,000 men and women in the field of arts. All workers will secure a security wage of from $65 to $94 a month.

It is planned to aid in the rehabilitation of artists who have lost some part of their skill through long unemployment, the encouragement and further training of artists who have shown ability but have not as yet achieved public recognition, and the development of a market for the work of artists, through education of the public. Similar movements are to be launched in behalf of musicians and the other groups that come under the head of culture.

It is difficult to figure how any valid objection could be made to the "white collar" project, but, as it is the policy of certain people to fight anything done by the administration, it is likely an awful howl will go up, especially by the Fascist press.

B. F. Townsley, of Toronto, has issued an informative account of the mining industry of Canada under the title "Mine Finders." There is a lot of history in the publication, with nearly every large mine covered in a clever manner. We learn the mines in Canada are almost without exception the result of the daring of men who had little or no engineering training.

MORE COURT ACTION OVER ENGINEER JOB

This week Joseph Bullock, attorney for U. S. Marshall, one of the contestants for the prolonged battle seared county engineer job in San Mateo County, filed briefs with the Appellate Court in San Francisco. He expects mandamus proceedings within the next two weeks and the county engineer fight will be in full swing again.

Carl Scott, the other contestant, is seeking $1620 in unpaid salary, and also the right to the office. Marshall claims that he is the county engineer, having been appointeed by the board of supervisors. The general public, who pay the bills, are waiting on the side lines while court proceedings, supervisor meetings, district attorney's office and the county executive appear to be playing the game of "On Again—Off Again."

BUSY SESSION OF CITY FATHERS MONDAY NIGHT

rect to the State Highway Commission.

The city engineer was instructed to contact the State Highway Commission with regard to placing lights on Junipero Serra boulevard south of School street. He will report at the adjourned meeting.

The Board of Trustees of the Jefferson Union High School District submitted the following communication, which was read by the clerk:

September 23, 1935.

To the Honorable City Council,
Daly City, California.

Gentlemen: We respectfully wish to call your attention to a condition which exists adjoining the Jefferson Union High School property which seriously affects the school in carrying on its educational work, and which is a menace to the health of the students and teachers in the high school. We refer to the clouds of dust which rise from the gravel and rock bunkers and mixing plant across the railroad track on the west, and which are carried to the high school grounds by the westerly winds which blow daily.

Since high school opened on August 26 there have been days on which it has been necessary to curtail the use of the grounds on account of this dust. Students and teachers have complained to the Principal, and it is feared that if this condition is not remedied serious eye, nose and throat affections as well as pulmonary disorders will result.

As your honorable board is aware, the Jefferson Union High School must carry on all of its physical education activities out-of-doors. These activities are required by state law. They consist of tennis, basket ball, volley ball, baseball, track and football. The Principal has found it necessary to instruct the physical education teachers not to take their classes out-of-doors when this dust is being carried over onto the high school grounds.

Boards of School Trustees are responsible for carrying out the educational program required by the State Department of Education. They are also responsible for the health and safety of the children while they are in school.

It is in the performance of this duty that we respectfully call your attention to the above conditions, and ask that you take such steps as may be necessary to correct them.

Very sincerely,
JEFFERSON UNION HIGH SCHOOL BOARD OF TRUSTEES,
By F. P. Callsen, President; Stella L. Jensen, Clerk.

After considerable discussion and voicing of strong protests against the condition complained of by residents of the Jefferson Park District, adjoining the high school grounds, the matter was referred to Councilman Sundermann to contact officials of the corporation operating the plant referred to, and report to a meeting of citizens at the high school on Tuesday evening.

A permit to operate a coal and wood business on Lot 2, Block 9 of Abbey Homestead Subdivision was requested by R. C. Earley of 148 Santa Cruz avenue. This was referred to the City Planning Commission for report at the adjourned meeting next Monday.

Mayor Smith asked permission to have distributed with city water bills circulars requesting an expression of the attitude of Daly City residents regarding proposed municipal improvements. The authority was granted.

DALY CITY ROD AND GUN CLUB NOTES

(By Bill Grantham)

With the exception of Ring Point, which showed some life the past week for the bass fishermen, there is not much to write about. The writer spent ten days of good fishing at Klamath River mouth. Caught steelhead to eight and a half pounds, King salmon to twenty pounds and Silvers to fifteen pounds. Enjoyed wonderful luck. Practically all fish, steelhead and salmon, were taken with No. 4 and No. 5 Bear Valley spinners (all brass), one salmon on silver out, copper in, also three steelhead on a homemade wobbler enameled white with painted red dots covering same. Tried to make it look like a bunch of loose salmon eggs. It sure was a steelheads nightmare, but it hooked some fish. Stopped at Camp Marigold three and a half miles north of Klamath on Redwood Highway. Can recommend this camp to sportsmen. This the highest class auto camp in the vicinity of the Klamath river. The writer will be glad to answer all inquiries concerning camps, boats, tackle and fishing conditions as found there the past two weeks.

Also toured some of the bass spots on the return trip and found fishing around Walnut Grove and Isleton to be fairly good. Plenty of fish one and three pounds between these towns.

Conditions at the Towers on Sacramento river were terrible. Water very muddy and not a boat on the river. Conditions at Sherman Island and Antioch the same last Friday and Saturday.

Sunday, September 29, will see the good ship Jubilee set sail for some good fishing spot with thirty of our club members. Eats and hop water in abundance. Telephone Secretary Kost for reservation at once, as the limit is thirty members. Take only tackle and bait, as everything else is furnished.

Some of Doc Kost's famous radio pictures are going to have their premiere at next meeting, first Friday in October, our first anniversary. One year old and membership 110. Membership is limited to 150, after which time charter will be closed. Bring your candidates on that night.

RETARDED SPARK

Running with the spark retarded at high speed causes extra fuel to be consumed, due to part of the mixture escaping without being ignited.

WORK OF THE YEAR WILL BE OUTLINED

Daly City Unit No. 40,, American Legion Auxiliary, will hold its first meeting under the new officers next Wednesday evening, October 2, at 8:30 o'clock. All members are urged to be present, as the new president, Mrs. Hilda Prziborowski, has many plans for the coming year and wishes to outline her work. The membership drive will be the first activity and we are going to compete for the District Silver Cup.

Plans will also be made for entertaining the County Council on October 10, at which time the council officers will be installed. Catherine Foreman of this Unit will be installed as president.

WHIST PARTY TO AID HOMELESS CHILDREN

Plans are now under way for the monster whist party to be given by El Carmelo Parlor No. 181, Native Daughters of the Golden West, for the benefit of the Homeless Children. The card party will be held in Masonic Hall on Wednesday evening, October 16.

The members of the committee, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Anne Biggio of Colma, are working very hard to make this card party a huge success and thereby make a substantial financial donation to this charitable work of the Native Sons and Native Daughters. For twenty-five years the placing of Homeless Children, regardless of color, class or creed, in homes for adoption, has been the outstanding project of the two orders.

Electricity is Your Home's Biggest Bargain.

SAD iron days became glad iron days when the sleek and shiny electric iron came into women's hands. Perhaps in your home it was the first electric servant you put to use. Right then your electric bill became more than a light bill.

Now for just a few pennies a day, about the price of a package of cigarettes, or a magazine or a piece of pie, electricity gives your home many services besides lighting. It "perks" coffee, makes ice, beats batter, crisps toast, curls hair, sweeps rugs, runs electric clocks and radios . . . well, you can probably add more to this list.

Really, now, isn't electricity making life a lot easier in your home since the day you first used an electric iron? What else gives you such full value for your money?

ROMAN COINS TELL HISTORY

The first Roman coins were cast about the middle of the Third century, B. C. They were of bronze, generally showing the prow of a ship on the reverse and heads of various divinities on the obverse. The "as" or "aes," one pound of bronze, was the unit of the Roman mint and its multiples and parts formed the Roman coinage. The value was placed on both sides in different manners. The mark of value of the "as" was 1. Its type was the head of Janus. The letter "S" indicated the value of the semis, four globules the sextans and one globule the unica. These were all parts of the "as," the unica being about one-twelfth.

SYNOPSIS

Following his father's criticism of his idle life, and withdrawal of financial assistance, Hal Ireland, son of a wealthy banker, is practically without funds but with the promise of a situation in San Francisco, which he must reach, from New York. He takes passage with a cross-country auto party on a "share expense" basis. Other members of the party include an attractive girl, Barry Trafford; middle-aged Giles Kerrigan; Sister Anastasia, a nun; and an individual whom he instinctively dislikes, Martin Crack. Barry's reticence annoys him. To Kerrigan he takes at once, but he distrusts Crack. He finds his intimacy with Kerrigan ripening, and makes a little progress with Barry. Through a misunderstanding, at a stopping place, Hal is directed to Barry's room, instead of his own, and they exchange kisses. Next day he tells her he loves her. She answers that she mustn't love him, without giving any reason. Crack brutally insults Kerrigan. Hal forces him to apologize abjectly, and his feeling of disgust toward Crack is intensified. On his insistence, Barry tells Hal that, at her father's urging, she had married a man many years older than she, and had promised her father, on his deathbed, to stick to her husband, "no matter what happened," for ten years. That was four years ago, and despite her knowledge of her husband's unworthiness, she is determined to keep her promise, though admitting her love for Hal.

"Come on," she said. 'Let's stretch our legs. Let's see Wyoming."

"Lady, have you ever had a good look at my legs?" Kerrigan asked, as a question of grave scholarship. "No, of course not; I beg pardon. The point is they're past stretching. Take my young friend Ireland with you, but let me have him back in good condition. And mind your pup: coyotes'll lead a dog till he's tired and then turn on him."

"I wish you'd come," said Barry.

"I wish I would," said Kerrigan, "but I won't. I'll sit here thinking of old, old brandy, and I'll be younger when you come back. Be off. If you run into Hostyles, send me a line by one of 'em and I'll be at your side in a twinkling—say, an hour and a half."

At the top of a little ridge to the westward, from which they could look down the road where Rasputin waited, and see across to the mountain range behind which the sun would set, they slowed their pace and stopped.

"That's not a long walk," said Barry.

"Long enough," said Hal. "Rattlesnakes."

"Oh gosh! not really?" said Barry, moving to him.

He watched her without stirring his arms, smiling a little at her and to himself. "No," he said. "I just wanted you to come where I could touch you and then show you I wouldn't. I'm proud of keeping my promise; you must ask me why I'm so strong."

There was a memory of solemn alarm under her smile. "Why are you?" she said dutifully. She sat down facing the west, her legs doubled and one firm shoulder hunched where she leaned against her arm.

"Because," he said, stretching himself before her, "because you've drawn your loveliness up into a kind of royalty that makes you more beautiful than I thought even you could be. Because you have a pride and purity in your eyes that goes as far above the world as that peace that makes Sister Anastasia beautiful. And yet your bravery is warm and living; you don't turn your back on life; and you can't turn your back on the most implacable thing I've known in life—my fantastic desires for you, for the beauty behind your eyes, for the beauty—"

She turned from her lonely looking into the west, glanced from his mouth to his eyes with that awed, still consternation, and said, "Hal, that's not—darling, we'll have to go back."

"And because," Hal went on, "tomorrow nothing you can put against me can stop me—nothing. There, I've finished. And you can watch the strength and implacability coming into me with every minute of my promise."

"Hal," she said hopelessly, stripping her hat from the golden luxuriance that ran simply back from the round of her forehead. She faced the west again and watched it, trying its farthest distance with the sorrow of her eyes. Then she turned to him and said artlessly, "What about your socks?"

"Socks?" said Hal, his look laughing as he glanced at them. "What about them?"

"I've got things to wash out—tonight, or whenever we get anywhere," she said. "If you've got any things, I can do them, too."

"You're certainly not going to wash my socks," said Hal.

She seemed to straighten a little in defense as she said, "And why not?"

"Why, d—n it all, because—"

"If you were ill," Barry interrupted, "would you let anybody else take care of you if I could? I wouldn't shine your shoes, because you're plenty strong enough to do it for yourself; but for the love of Mike why shouldn't I do washing for you if you've got things that need it? Is it beneath me, or something? Wouldn't you shine my shoes if I asked you to?"

"Of course."

"Well, then. Perhaps you didn't know you wear woolen socks, and woolen socks shrink if they're not carefully done."

"I didn't know that," said Hal. "Tell me more."

"I'd tell you lots more," said Barry, "if you'd try to see my meaning, and remember it."

"Barry, d'you think I forget anything you say—anything, even the first word you said to me, years ago, when you used to make me mad?"

"Well, what did I say to you first?" said Barry, challenge cheering her eyes.

"You said—We were standing in that place, wherever it was—you know—that place, and you said—No, signals off. We were in the car and you said it wasn't my cigarette that burned your coat."

Barry chuckled at him, slowly and huskily, with her head a little back and her firm, white throat full. "Close, Mr. Ireland, close. I'm glad you remembered. I used to watch you being made mad by me and love it. And now—" she said, her voice touching the edge of sorrow, then evading it in a little sigh: "now I'm asking you to let me wash your socks."

* * * * * * *

The sun set in bold, steady red, a short ledge of cloud fastened across it; and the whole dry spread of the land—the tawny, tufted sweep of plain ground, the rust and gray and emery stripes of strata under the flat terraces of rock, the high, heavy mountain peaks piled beyond—all came by a soft, purple clarity, as if they stood in tinted water. Hal and Barry had risen to watch the silent glory of the colors—she with her back against him and her hands clasped over his, the slow rhythm of her breathing under his touch.

She took a faltering breath and let it go reluctantly; and Hal, his mouth near the faintly fragrant thicket of half-curls, whispered "What?"

She turned her head to look at his lips, then up at his eyes, her looking intimate, expectant; then she stood away from him and returned to the fading colors of the western sky. "Beauty—" she said; "beauty to last forever, in a few minutes."

He pressed her hand before he let it go, watching her. "I s'pose while we can find the way we'd better go back," he said. "Some day, we'll never have to go back."

With a limber bending of her body, she picked up her hat, and it swung between them in her hand as they started down.

It wasn't cool, but Kerrigan was arranging brush and a few desiccated fence posts for a fire when they came to the car.

"Hi there," he said comfortably, as if they had kept house together for a long time. "Got the sun put away all right?"

"Yes," said Hal. "Very prettily, too. What's the fire for? Goin' to have a blizzard?"

"No," said Kerrigan. "Just like to attract attention."

"Haven't seen any to attract," said Hal. "But you know your publicity out here better than I do."

There was a pleasant murmur of welcome as Barry got into the car where the others still waited. Hal, with a strange, assured feeling of peace upon him, looked up at the first clear-riding stars and breathed his chest slowly full.

"Lord, it's good," he said to Kerrigan. "You should've told me I'd like Wyoming."

With the star-scattered night complete and the fire going, they made a thin supper from Mrs. Pulsipher's oranges, the popcorn which she ordered John to uncache, and some agglomerated fruit-drops from a bag in Kerrigan's pocket. The atmosphere was subdued, quiet, the voices not quite tentative but variously respectful, as if some one were asleep nearby. And each time John, after a silence, wondered where that Mr. Crack was, Hal felt the peace upon his blood freshly—a peace assured of strength, of Barry's nearness, and of his final coming to her—after the term of his promise.

Those in the car got out to stretch and stroll briefly and look up into the night; and past ten, when John gave a yawn that echoed in the shameless cavern of his mouth, Mrs. Pulsipher suggested sleep. She and Sister Anastasia disposed themselves in the back seat, while John cramped his gaunt lankiness in the front and Barry, Hal, and Kerrigan sat along the running board, watching the fire and talking.

"Listen," said Barry suddenly, interrupting her own speech. Doc raised his head for a grunt, sniffing. "There comes somebody."

They listened. A coyote—the pale, pretty ghost of a guilty dog—passed on the edge of the gloom beyond the fire, and Barry's hand came to rest on Hal's knee.

"It is somebody," Kerrigan muttered in a moment, looking at his watch. "He's been long enough. It's eleven."

Impulsively Hal said, "It's not Crack," and wondered why he was so coolly sure.

Barry looked around at him slowly, solemnly. "How d'you know?" she said.

Hal moved a little inside his clothes. "Doesn't feel like him," he said. He gave a short, uneasy laugh of deprecation.

The footfalls—made by heavy, stiff-soled shoes—brought their slovenly beat nearer and stopped. Hal got up and walked around the car. A broad glow, as from a white and distant fire, was spread in the east where the moon would come, but he could see no one down the road. "Evening," he called into the dark.

"Evenin', evenin'," came a cracked voice after an interval. "You the folks got the fire? I seen it from a way back and come to see what was goin' on."

He clumped up to the fire—a tall, ratty man, no hat on his tangled hair, shirt dirtily open at his throat, blue-jeans cut off about three inches above the tops of his veteran cow-boots. His grinning lips were stained at the corners and his bright, empty eyes watched the fire, not any of the three who were near it.

"You folks stranded, 'ey?" he said cheerily in a minute.

"Looks it," said Kerrigan.

"I run into some folks last year was stranded," he said. "Over t'other side. Seems like I'm always runnin' into folks that's stranded." He grinned happily at the fire.

"Didn't see a fella go out to the highway and get a lift into town, did you?" Hal said. "Late this afternoon?"

"To what town?" the man said absently.

"Any town," said Hal.

"No," said the man. "Last week I seen a feller get a lift out on the road. Goin' west, he was. But I mind these other folks was stranded there—over t'other side. I come on one of 'em drinkin' water out of a little crick we got. I says to him, 'How's it taste?' an' he says 'Good,' an' I says, 'That's good, I'm glad t'know an' he says, 'Why?' an' I told him why." He laughed silently without looking at any of them.

"Why?" said Barry in calm interest.

"'Cause I found one o' my sheep lyin' drownded f'uther up the crick where he was drinkin', an' I wanted t'know how it tasted."

"Did you tell him that?" said Kerrigan.

"I told him," said the man. "He didn't like it."

"You're a sheepherder," said Kerrigan.

"I am," said the man, with a quick nod of pride. "Only I ain't jus' now. I been fired." He nodded again, his stained mouth open. "I live over t'other side there in the shed by the Old South Corral. An' when I feel like it some day, I'll tear it down."

"Why'll you tear it down?" said Kerrigan.

"It'll make 'em sore," said the man. "You can have anything you want up there. If you want to tear the shack down, I'll help you."

"That's mighty nice of you," said Kerrigan, "but I guess we'll just sit here for a while."

The man watched the fire a little longer. Then he turned and grinned at Kerrigan and said, "Well, I guess I'd oughta get back. Moon's comin' up."

"Well, good night to you," said Kerrigan.

"Good night," said the man, and abruptly started clumping away again.

The late moon floated up clear and brilliant to pale the stars with its gray-blue dusk, and they moved from the running board, nearer the fire, to watch that bright drifting.

"You're at liberty," Kerrigan said to Barry, "to lean against my friend Ireland and have a nap."

She gave her soft laugh and relaxed against Hal, as if she'd been waiting for Kerrigan's permission. Her hair touched his cheek as she settled her head to his shoulder; she looked up at him in sleepy comfort, saying: "Too heavy?" then pressed closer to him and closed her eyes. And in the naturalness of that, Hal was near believing he had dreamt the obstacles to their united fortune: her trapped allegiance to that man, that husband, was too grotesque a sacrilege.

The slow moon marked the moving of the night across the sky; and Hal and Kerrigan sat together in it, by Barry's sleeping—kept silences that were broken only by the soft settling sound of the fire, or murmured of things not so much satisfying in themselves as in the fact that they spoke of them here.

Every so often Hal looked down at Barry's face—her dark lashes laid in a little radiant fringe on each smooth cheek, her vital lips at rest together, her breathing gentle and oblivious of care. And once when Kerrigan happened to glance at him as he looked up, they smiled at each other as if she somehow belonged to both of them.

News of the Week

Among the several highlights of the recent State Bar Convention, held in San Francisco, was a talk by Dr. Robert A. Milliken, Nobel prize winner and university president, on "Whither Mankind." Twelve-hundred California lawyers and attorneys attended the convention.

Al Chamberlain, self-styled two gun man, whose arguments over horses led to the fatal shooting of Police Chief C. B. O'Neal, is not criminally insane, according to the Santa Rosa jury who earlier convicted him of first-degree murder. Thus he will go to the penitentiary instead of the asylum.

Radicals received two knock-out punches at the State Federation of Labor Convention, San Diego. First, Edward Vandeleur was re-elected president by a big majority, defeating leftist Harry Bridges. Second, a resolution was adopted excluding Communists from membership.

Over 700 residents of Santa Clara County have signed affidavits saying that the county is prejudiced against David Lamson, whose third wife-murder trial has started. Defense counsel is seeking a change of venue. Among the signees are Kathleen Norris and several Stanford University professors.

Mounting county expenses has caused Los Angeles' Central Manufacturing District to threaten a suit to tie up more than $5,000,000 reserves in Los Angeles County's new budget. The reserves are excessive and will be used for "pork barrel" purposes charges the district. If successful, the suit would merely prevent expenditure of the funds. Taxes would not be lowered.

Contempt proceedings against John V. Lewis, collector of internal revenue, have been dismissed in a San Francisco Superior Court. Lewis was cited for refusing to testify before the County Grand Jury in its investigation of purported police graft. The court upheld the Treasury Department's ruling forbidding its agents from giving official information.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt is leaving Washington sometime late this week for a hurried trip to the Pacific Coast. He will inspect Boulder Dam, make a speech at Los Angeles and another at San Diego. He also plans a Pacific fishing trip aboard the cruiser Houston.

Jaunty, 20 pounds heavier than he was two years ago on his last sojourn from San Quentin, Tom Mooney has again made his appearance in the courts at San Francisco to continue his 19-year-old fight for freedom. Said he, "I think it obvious that the State Supreme Court won't do anything, but I feel certain the United States Supreme Court will."

Bloody testimony that crime does not pay was found near Lodi in the shape of an unidentified man's body. There was a bullet hole through his back. Shortly before the body was found and near the same spot, E. L. Littlefield and a girl companion had been held up and robbed. As the bandits jumped in an auto to escape, Littlefield picked up an overlooked rifle and fired. He was sure he hit one.

The California Institute of Technology has established a soil conservation and flood control station at Pasadena. Exhaustive studies will be made of streamflows, erosion, tides and types of soil. It is expected that important geographic problems will be solved by the experimental laboratories, which will be in charge of geologists, civil engineers and other experts.

After a strike of many months, a one-year working pact has been signed by the Central Eureka Mining Company and the Mother Lode Union No. 48 of mine workers. Present wage scale and working hours will be continued. The agreement provides that there shall be no discrimination against union men, and that non-union men will be permitted to affiliate themselves with the union if they wish.

Restaurateurs' fight against the sales tax has been balked temporarily. The State Supreme Court has denied Dan Dicktakes' petition for a review of the law. Dicktakes is a Sacramento cafe owner who refused to pay the sales tax, claiming it was discriminatory against restaurants in that it exempted grocery store foods but not cafe meals. He and other restaurant men plan to carry the test case to a final decision.

It looked like the Garden of Eden to the 400 men who fought a fire in Stoddard Canyon near Ontario. Flitting through the smouldering underbrush were fifty men and women members of the Arcadian Club, a nudist organization.

The last will and testament of Will Rogers, written shortly before his fatal Alaska trip, has been admitted to probate at Los Angeles. The entire estate has been left to Mrs. Betty Blake Rogers, the widow. Its estimated value is $2,500,000.

DYNAMITE

In Fort Myers, Fla., O. J. Hall, fifty-one, superintendent of a light and power company, placed a stick of dynamite in his mouth and lighted the fuse. It blew his head to bits.

In Estherville, Iowa, Burt Bloom, sixty, retired farmer, placed dynamite in a rock bed, lighted a fuse and stood back. Nothing happened. Bloom waited. At last he cautiously approached the charge. As he bent over the dynamite exploded and killed him.

ROADS PROMOTE GROWTH

A century before Christ all Europe, with the exception of Rome and Athens, was a barbaric wilderness.

One factor, more than anything else, contributed to the development, civilization and community growth of Europe.

That factor was Roman roads.

Through the wildest forests, the most savage tribes and the remotest villages, the Romans built their fine, straight, enduring highways.

People traveled those highways, learned to know each other, introduced trade and brought new habits and manners to barbarians.

Roman roads gave Europe her first knowledge of PROSPERITY.

Roman roads gave Europe her first incentive to GROW.

What the Roman roads meant to Europe, roads like the Alaska Highway mean to upper British Columbia.

We do not suggest, of course, that British Columbians anywhere require roads as a civilizing agent.

But we do suggest that the first step towards inducing PROSPERITY and GROWTH in this province consists of transportation facilities that will permit a steady stream of travel and new money to flow through our territory.

As an investment, the ten millions which represent Canada's share in the project would return infinitely more revenue than the 3 per cent that money would cost us.

That 3 per cent would be quintupled in the returns which a real tourist traffic would bring to us.

The truth is that we cannot afford NOT to help build a highway to Alaska.

Such a highway, functioning as a link between the 120 million people of the United States and their alluring northern colony, would cause a continuous stream of Americans to pass through British Columbia, leaving new money at every store, theater and hotel along the way.

Just as in Roman days, roads promote GROWTH and PROSPERITY wherever they may be built.

That Alaska Highway, easy to deprecate on first analysis, might easily turn out to be one of the richest investments that the people of this country can possibly make.—Vancouver Sun.

LESSON SERMON OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

In all Christian Science churches, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass., a Lesson-Sermon will be read Sunday, September 29, on the subject "Reality."

The Golden Text will be: "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and someth down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning" (James 1: 17). Bible selections will include the following passage from Jeremiah 51: 10, 15: "The Lord hath brought forth our righteousness: come, and let us declare in Zion the work of the Lord our God. . . . He hath made the earth by his power, he hath established the the world by his wisdom, and hath stretched out the heaven by his understanding."

A passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be included, which reads as follows: "The three great verities of Spirit, omnipotence, omnipresence, omniscience, — Spirit possessing all power, filling all space, constituting all Science, — contradict forever the belief that matter can be actual. These eternal verities reveal primeval existence as the radiant reality of God's creation, in which all that He has made is pronounced by His wisdom good" (pp. 109, 110).

SEVENTEENTH DISTRICT OPENS BUSINESS YEAR

Many Subjects Discussed By Members From Various Parts Of State

Enthusiastically received were the greetings and inspirational talks of members of the advisory board, past presidents, officers and chairmen of Seventeenth District, California Congress of Parents and Teachers, when activities for the year were officially opened, Friday of last week, in the auditorium of the Burlingame High School before a large attendance of delegates throughout San Mateo County.

W. T. Van Voris, principal of Burlingame High School, in his address of welcome, spoke of the confidence shown by the association in public schools, high quality of leaders and interest in children.

Miss Loda May Davis, of the faculty of San Mateo Junior College, stressing the difficulties which confront the consumer and protection enlightened by public opinion, explained "Consumers Education." Mrs. L. G. Owen, trustee of San Mateo Junior College District, announced that the State Department of Education has under way the establishing of five experimental centers in the state devoted to Consumer Education and that San Mateo has been chosen as one of the centers. Beginning Tuesday of this week and each week thereafter classes are held at the San Mateo Junior College auditorium from 9 to 10 a. m. on Consumers Education under the direction of Miss Davis. Also classes in parliamentary law will be held at the same place on Tuesdays from 10 to 11 a. m. by John Illiff. Mrs. Owen urged all new presidents and members to attend these classes, for the membership at large is fortunate to have this opportunity. For the convenience of members Professor Illiff will give the same course at Sequoia Union High School every Tuesday from 11 a. m. until noon, under the auspices of the Parent Teacher Association there. These lectures are open to the public.

Reporting on the recent state board meeting, Mrs. R. D. Richards, president, announced that Dr. Gertrude Laws has discontinued her classes in Parent Education. Speaking at the board meeting, Vierling Kersey, state superintendent of schools, said : "Parent education is your 'child,' and is a mutual responsibility of the California Congress and the State Department of Education. It has been your great contribution to public education in California. It is now a part of the total education program. Its status in California indicates our co-operation must be in terms of emphasis on the training of leaders." To this end a reorganization in the division of Parent Education, of which Dr. Gertrude Laws is chief, has been planned for the coming year.

Advisory board members present were: Miss Pansy Jewett Abbott, superintendent of schools, San Mateo County; Homer Martin, superintendent of San Mateo Union High School and Junior College District; Mrs. L. G. Owen, trustee San Mateo Junior College District, and Mrs. Mable Gregson, school nurse, Burlingame Elementary Schools.

Miss Ada Beveridge of the faculty of San Mateo Junior College faced an appreciative audience when she gave the humorous readings, "Two Slatterns and the King" and "Bairns Cuddle Doon."

"Tolerance" was the subject of the brief talk by Mrs. E. I. Bartlett, state chairman of home reading. Seventeenth District won the state life membership cup, for the year 1934-1935. This is the second trophy for life membership, the first being on display at the high school.

Luncheon reservations for the Pescadero conference should be made at once to Mrs. Margaret Swiggert, Box 194, Pescadero.

NEW LAW PERMITS LIMIT EXCEPTIONS A T INTERSECTIONS

Under certain conditions motorists may now drive through an intersection where the view is obstructed at greater speeds than the uniform fifteen-mile fixed for travel at such points. An amendment adopted at the last session of the Legislature is now in effect, permitting higher speeds at obstructed intersections on through highways or where traffic is controlled. The amendment fixes a new maximum speed of thirty miles, in addition to intervening limits of twenty and twenty-five miles, according to location.

Provisions of the new law are reviewed in a statement by the chairman of Legislative Committee of the California State Automobile Association, who commented on the measure as follows:

"Motorists should carefully note that these new speed limits apply only under certain conditions and that the fifteen-mile rule must otherwise be obeyed. The evident purpose of the Legislature was to provide a little more latitude at certain types of intersections for the purpose of facilitating traffic movement.

"The changes are exceptions to the previous uniform fifteen-mile limit at intersections where the view of approaching traffic on streets entering the intersection is obstructed. They apply only to those obstructed intersections which are on through highways, or which are traffic controlled whether on through highways or not. At such through highway or traffic controlled intersections the following slightly increased speed limits are now in effect:

"If in a business district, the twenty-mile speed limit which applies in all business districts.

"If in a residence district, the twenty-five mile speed limit which applies in all residence districts.

"Elsewhere, a limit of thirty miles per hour through obstructed intersections which are on through highways or which may be traffic controlled, whether on a through highway or not.

"These new limits are simply exceptions and do not mean that a motorist can go through any obstructed intersection at twenty, twenty-five, or thirty miles an hour. They apply only to through routes or where there is traffic control. At all other intersections where the view is obstructed the speed limit is still fifteen miles."

An obstructed intersection is defined by the California Vehicle Act as one where a driver, during the last one hundred feet of approach, does not have a clear and uninterrupted view of the intersection and of traffic upon all entering streets for a distance of one hundred feet from the intersection.

TOWNSEND CLUB OF DALY CITY MEETS

Townsend Club No. 1 of this city held its monthly meeting in the city hall, Friday evening of last week.

The principal speaker of the evening was Mr. Cox of Oakland, a member of the Townsend Lecture Board, who also speaks over Station KRE three times weekly.

Albert J. Witt Jr., county supervisor, gave a short talk and said that the Townsend Plan, if adopted, is the best method to save the country, state and county and stated there would be a great saving in taxes in this county if the plan becomes a reality.

Mayor H. H. Smith gave a fine talk on the necessity of passing such a measure and promised a donation of $10 monthly to help defray expenses of the club.

Thanks were given to all who give their time and to Nick Hansen, especially, who has brought in most of the applications for membership, and to Fred Schmidt, who has donated the printing.

Fire Chief Chesney is arranging a whist party on October 15 in the Baby Clinic to raise funds for the club.

Leon Hercowitz Radio Co. has offered 5 per cent on all radios sold to club members, which now numbers 180 and is expected to reach 1500 soon.

This club meets every third Friday.

They must contain not more than 200 words. They must be addressed to a bonafide person not in the immediate family of the writer, perferably to someone within a 150 mile radius of San Mateo County.

4. All letters will be judged first by the classroom teacher and then two letters in each section will be chosen by the school principal for submission to the judges. The judges will be chosen by the Fiesta committee, and will include a newspaper publisher, a judge and a university professor.

5. The Contest will open on September 16 and close on September 30. All letters for final judging must be in the hands of Miss Dorothy Jones, Northbrae School, San Bruno, by midnight of that date.

WEEKLY BULLETIN

SUGGESTIONS IN CASE OF FIRE

By Chief A. P. Chesney

Remember that smoke and heat rise and the nearer the floor you get the better the air. If necessary to cross a smoke filled room, bend low and go on hands and knees and follow the wall around to the desired doorway or window. The air is better along the wall and the wall serves as a guide, thus preventing confusion and loss of bearings. Always breathe at an open window if possible and keep near it if awaiting help.

If no help is at hand and you must get out of a window, throw a bed mattress out, if one is available, and try to drop on that. Better still, make a life line by ripping bed sheets through the middle; join the ends by square knots carefully tied to prevent slipping; add to the length by tying in by the corners any blankets that may be available.

Tie this to the side bar of the bed in the middle or fasten it to a table leg or a large chair so arranged as not to be pulled through the window. Should there be flame issuing from a window below, through which you must pass, wrap a blanket or coat around your head and do not drop the life line until you are ready to use it, or otherwise it may burn through and drop you.

FLIES HERE TO ADDRESS CLASS OF HIGH SCHOOL

Edward Treadwell, a San Francisco attorney, flew from Los Angeles, recently, to address the Jefferson students on the Constitution. Following are a few extracts from his talk:

The American flag is the emblem of our Constitution. We should not worship it as a savage worships an idol, but we should look upon it with understanding and intelligence.

The framers of the Constitution knew many kinds of governments and from their knowledge of the success and failure of these governments framed our own Constitution.

During the years preceding this work America produced many great men. More outstanding men were present at the Constitutional Convention than at any other assembly in our history. Jefferson, the man for whom your school was named, was a giant among giants.

These men understood the great problems of a great people. They realized that certain rights belong to every person, such as: freedom of action, ownership of property, expression of thoughts, personal beliefs and religion.

They provided for courts—local, county, state and federal—throughout the land, where people could go for justice.

They also knew that we needed a strong government, so that we would be free from foreign invasion; have protection and have interstate commerce. They put the control of this commerce under the federal government to insure its stability.

These men were afraid of one man rule. They knew that the power had to come directly from the people to last. These powers were divided among the local and federal governments.

"Because you will be expected to take part in the government of the United States, learn the fundamentals of that government," was the lesson Mr. Treadwell wanted the students to learn.

CHANGES HAVE TAKEN PLACE IN PUBLIC MIND

No Longer Look With Suspicion On Used Automobiles

One of the most significant changes that has taken place in the automotive world during the last few years is the attitude of the public toward the used car, according to A. J. Bertini, local Ford dealer.

"There was a time when the average buyer was afraid of a used car," Mr. Bertini says. "He believed he was taking a chance whenever he purchased a car that had seen service in the hands of a previous owner. However, that condition no longer exists, and the motor car dealers themselves have brought about this change in sentiment.

"Reputable dealers realized that their reputations meant something to the people in their respective territories, and they placed those reputations back of their used cars, just as the manufacturers backed their new automobiles. They spent many thousands of dollars for modern equipment with which to prepare their used automobiles for service before they were offered to the public, and they saw to it that every used car was properly reconditioned before it was offered for sale.

"Because of Ford's great sales volume, Ford dealers everywhere had large stocks of good used cars, and they led the way, so to speak, in the matter of guaranteeing the performance of their reconditioned automobiles. This built good will and increased their new car sales as well as their used car business.

"So it has come to pass that the public now views the purchase of a used car with confidence, realizing that the guarantee of the dealer will be fulfilled.

"Thirty years ago Henry Ford said he was not just building and selling automobiles, but was furnishing transportation. And that is the attitude of the Ford dealer today. He is not thinking in terms of new cars only. He is thinking in terms of transportation. So he takes the same interest in serving a used car customer as he does in serving the purchaser of a new 1935 Ford V-8, and this is one of the reasons why Ford dealers everywhere are enjoying such tremendous new car volume.

"The used car market today is a buyer's market. Prices are low and quality is high. Due to Ford's remarkable sales records, Ford dealers have exceptional values in used cars this year. There can be no successful new car operation without a successful used car operation, and Ford dealers are getting their share of both new car and used car business as Ford V-8 sales roll on toward that goal of 'a million and more cars in 1935.'

"We of the Ford dealer organization recognize that we are not in the new car business, but in the motor car business—the transportation business. Our obligation is one of service whether the purchaser buys a used car or a 1935 Ford V-8."

Death to Poisonous Black Widow Spider

One of the most poisonous insects which troubles mankind is the Black Widow spider. While this insect is fairly easily identified by the hour-glass marking on the under side, oftentimes people have been bitten by it before they have had time to discover its dangerous character. The best plan is to regard all spiders with suspicion, and to destroy them as soon as they are discovered.

A reliable insect spray, containing an ample quantity of Pyrethrins, a product derived from Pyrethrum flowers, is not only sure death to spiders, including the dread Black Widow, but kills flies, mosquitoes and other insect pests.

In making up a product of this kind, it is important that ample Pyrethrins be included to give a complete killing effect. Unless sufficient Pyrethrins are contained in the mixture insects may be stunned and rendered groggy for a time, but recover from the effects of the spray.

THE FIRST GAME LAW

Two hundred years ago the Indians in Kentucky set aside game refuges for bears and created what may have been the first game law in America, says Vernon Bailey, retired naturalist of the Biological survey. Bear fat, bear meat, and bear skins were the most prized returns of the hunt. Large areas were set aside as "beloved bear grounds" where only a limited number of animals could be killed each year, so that a permanent supply of these animals would be maintained. Mr. Bailey believes it might be well today to follow the example of the Kentucky Indians, and establish "beloved bear grounds."

WRONG AXLE TILT

The tendency of a car to wander from one side of the road to the other is usually because of incorrect caster, or tilt of the front axle.

This condition is the result of worn parts, settling of springs, and the like. Caster, camber (outward slant of front wheels) and toe-in of front wheels are so closely related that altering one affects all. The remedy is to replace worn parts and have camber, caster, and toe-in restored to their original specifications.

Headlight Important

New car owners often fail to make correct use of their multi-beam headlamps with which nearly all new cars are equipped today.

The most common blunder is that of forgetting that the long range beam should be used only when no car is approaching from the opposite direction. It has much greater range and intensity than the old driving light and, like all greater power, should be handled with care.

Cypress Circle, U. A. O. D., No. 14 celebrated its thirty-fifth anniversary at a banquet held for members and their friends Thursday of last week at the Boulevard Cafe in San Francisco. The members presented the ring in appreciation of the untiring efforts of Mrs. Benassini in carrying on the lodge work.

An afternoon whist party will be held in Colombo Hall Tuesday of next week by Cypress Circle U. A. O. D. No. 14. All members and their friends are invited to attend.

Mrs. J. J. Grondona and Mrs. A. T. Hollingsworth represented the Colma P T. A. at the executive board meeting for the district which was held at Burlingame High School Friday of last week.

A group consisting of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Dennis, Mrs. John Garibaldi and her two daughters, and Mrs. P. J. Peterson motored to San Jose Thursday of this week to spend the day with Mr. and Mrs. George Dennis.

A practical joke may sometimes be carried too far, or at least that is the opinion of P. L. Peterson, who is vowing never to get too near a fire cracker again. Someone placed a lighted one in his pocket at his home Saturday evening of last week and, not only did it tear the trousers beyond repair, but inflicted a painful burn besides.

FAR WESTERN BANK BUSINESS MUCH HIGHER

Far western business has reached its highest level in 43 months, as measured by the statistical index of Bank of America.

According to the September issue of the Bank of America Business Review, the bank's preliminary August index of far western business registered 69.2, the highest point since January, 1932.

The August, 1935, index was 6.8 per cent higher than the like month a year ago, 12½ per cent above August, 1933, and 17.9 per cent above the August, 1932, index figure. The index also recorded a gain of 5.8 per cent over July, 1935.

Substantial increases in carloadings and electric power production were largely responsible for the high level reached by the index in August, which was 26.5 per cent above the depression low recorded in March of 1933.

August was the eighth consecutive month of this year in which bank debits of the far west have gained over corresponding periods of the two previous years, the Bank of America Business Review reports

August bank debits of 27 cities reporting in seven western states totaled $2,490,474,000, a gain over August, 1934, of $411,685,000, or 19.8 per cent.

With 101 retail establishments of the far west reporting an increase of 8.8 per cent in dollar value of sales for August over the like month last year, this district's gain was more than twice the percentage increase of the entire nation.

This continues the record for the year to date, with dollar volume of retail sales of the west showing a 10 per cent increase over the first eight months of 1934, while the gain in retail sales for the nation as a whole was 4 per cent for the same period.

Other outstanding business gains for the first eight months of this year were registered in building permits, with an increase of 100 per cent over 1934; carloadings, up 3.3 per cent and electric power production, which was up 4½ per cent over the first eight months of 1934.

Loose Shoe The Cause

Brake squeaks today are the same in their effect, but the cause may differ from that of a few years ago.

Before the arrival of enclosed brakes, mud, grit, and water getting on the lining were responsible for much of the brake noise. Now, however, a brake squeak may be due to looseness in the shoe, itself.

Hot Weather and Tires

Don't run with tires inflated below the recommended pressure merely because you have discovered that tires pick up air when in contact with warm pavements.

The tire manufacturers are well aware of this characteristic of their products and they make due allowance for it in their recommendations of correct inflation pressures.

DRIVER LICENSE RULES TIGTHENED BY NEW STATUTE

New regulations concerning drivers' licenses are now in effect with the object of weeding out incompetent or habitually dangerous drivers. Actual fitness for the privilege of operating an automobile, as implied by posession of a driver's license, is being put to the test of a system of records designed for that purpose. Each individual driver of California's more than three million licensed operators will have placed against his name in the files of the Department of Motor Vehicles every accident and every violation of traffic laws as shown by accident reports and court records.

Drivers whose records raise doubt as to their fitness will be summoned for re-examination to determine whether their licenses should be suspended or revoked. Thus the weeding out process is expected to operate with methodical accuracy and effect.

An amended section of the vehicle code provides that the department may conduct an investigation as to whether a license should be suspended or revoked upon receiving information or upon a showing by its records:

1. That the license has been involved as a driver in any accident causing death or personal injury or serious to property.
2. That he has been involved in three or more accidents within a period of twelve consecutive months.
3. That he is an habitual violator of traffic laws.
4. That he is an habitual reckless, negligent, or incompetent driver.
5. That he has permitted unlawful or fraudulent use of his license
6. That any ground exists for which a license might be refused.

Immediate revocation of the driver's license is mandatory in the event of conviction of manslaughter or negligent homicide; of causing injury or death when driving while drunk; of driving when addicted to or under the influence of narcotics; of failure to stop after an accident involving personal injury; of three charges of reckless driving within twelve conthe vehicle code or any felony under the vehicle code or any felony in which a motor vehicle is used.

Licenses so revoked cannot be renewed until the expiration of one year and until the driver involved has given proof of ability to respond in damages as provided by law.

Provision is also made for suspension of licenses in misdemeanor drunk driving cases (those not involving death or injury); for reckless driving causing bodily injury; and in misdemeanor cases of failure to stop after an accident.

An important addition to the tests for issuance of a driver's license is that of mental fitness, although it is provided that "any mental or physical defect which in the opinion of the Department does not affect the applicant's ability to exercise reasonable and ordinary control in operating a motor vehicle shall not prevent the issuance of a license."

Use Same Body Oil

Don't use a heavier oil on the touring trip. It does not mean reduced consumption, but rather, under ordinary conditions, increased oil burning. Moreover, a heavy oil tends to cut down the gasoline mileage yield.

SAYS GOLD IS OF NO VALUE UNLESS PUT TO WORK

Mining Editor of North Sees No Chance of Stabilization If Nations Continus To Hoard Metal.

In the following article from the Vancouver Sun, Sidney Norman finds fault with the division of media of exchange. He says:

There will be no stabilization yet awhile!

England has again rejected overtures by France and will not even consider the matter at this time.

Why should she?

What has a nation owning 7.3 per cent of the world's gold to gain by stabilizing her currency in competition with holdings of 37.9 per cent and 25 per cent by United States and France?

And there can be no permanent stabilization until media of exchange are more evenly divided, or some substitute adopted for the present yardstick of value.

Since 1934 there has been further acumulation in the United States, where nine billion dollars' worth lies inert and sterilized far from the reach of man.

United States and France now "sit on" seven-tenths of all the monetary gold of the world.

There is but one known method by which gold can be re-distributed, through purchase of goods by these that have gold with which to settle international balances.

Nationalism the world over in the absence of media of exchange is drying up that avenue of distribution and, added to that, is a miserly desire on the part of the heaviest holders to hold on to what they have, oblivious of the fact that the more they have the less the balance of the world possesses and therefore the less trade there will be.

All but two of the players of the poker game of life have withdrawn from the table and are now using chips of their own selection.

They may be bluffing, but so long as their chips pass current, their game will go on and the two nations with the high stacks of gold chips will fiddle around with an uninteresting game of their own.

Gold is of no earthly value unless it is put to work.

England learned that lesson long ago and with both hands loaned her gold to other nations, thereby tying to herself their trade.

President Roosevelt momentarily glimpsed the same obvious fact and timidly tried to distribute gold for silver.

That worked for a while, but clamor arose from vested interests and lately even that policy seems to have been revised, with the result that gold is again accumulating in the treasury vaults at Washington.

France, as usual, is the great stumbling block to sensible solution of the world problem of currency.

Seemingly, she looks upon gold as the ultimate value, just to be gazed upon, forgetting that it cannot be eaten or turned into clothing or comfort unless it changes hands.

And, the greater the turn-over, the greater the comfort and prosperity, which are simply reflections of intensified trade.

Daily the world grows smaller!

Isolation — the single national blessedness of Washington — is impossible!

Gold must be re-distributed before the world can resume any semblance of normal prosperity.

And, more than that, it must be revalued greately upward, before the smaller nations of the world can hope to again take part in the game that is never-ending as long as life remains.

The world suffers from currencyitis, and a major operation is imperative.

Revalued gold, plus remonetized silver, are the instruments which, wielded skilfully by common sense, will free the world from many, yes most, of its ills.

JOHN M'LAREN TO BE FIESTA GUEST

John McLaren, beloved dean of horticulture, and superintendent of parks for San Francisco, will be honorary chairman of judges for the huge flower show which will be the leading feature of the San Mateo County Products and Floral Fiesta. "Uncle" John McLaren, still vigorous and enthusiastic despite his 86 years, began his California career in San Mateo County. With him he brought a number of young Scotch gardeners, many of whom are still active in the county to this day. "It is particularly fitting that "Uncle" John should take an active part in the most important showing of San Mateo County products that has ever been held," said George Davis, president of the Fiesta Committee, in announcing the appointment. "When the grand old man of the gardens accepted our invitation to act as honorary chairman of judges the committee felt as though the final seal of sure success had been put on the Fiesta."

One of the most interesting features of the Fiesta will be the time devoted on the program to honoring the veteran gardeners of San Mateo County, including only those who have been actively engaged in horticultural work for at least twenty-five years in the county. Phillip Graves, member of the advisory committee and for many years an associate of John McLaren, will have charge of this event. He is now collecting a list of the old timers, and asks that everyone help him with suggestions so that no one shall be omitted whose name should be on the list of honored guests.

WELL BRED ONES TO BE IN "PINK" FOR EARLY RUNS

Macomber Blood Lines Will Be To Fore In Sport At Tanforan

Runners owned by Major Austin Taylor are likely to be important factors in the racing to begin at Tanforan, Saturday, October 5. The best of reports come from the track about the sun-up training gallops of the good ones from the north. The "spell" being accorded to thoroughbreds of the mining operator is just what was needed following a hard campaign in the summer.

Major Taylor has a representative at Saratoga each August to pick up colts and fillies that promise to develop into stakes winners, such as those Trainer J. A. Gormley is conditioning for him at Tanforan. More than usual interest was aroused this year in the two year olds, Rose Camp and Sundad. Rose Camp was bred in British Columbia, but Sunday, by the well known Sun Briar, was purchased as a yearling at Saratoga.

Rose Camp's blood lines are familiar to Tanforan fans, as her dam, War Rose, is by imported War Fame, from Hellebore. War Fame was one of a dozen stallions A. K. Macomber had at Milpitas some years ago. Macomber, a leading racing man in England and France, went into the game while the Panama-Pacific Exposition racing was on at the Presidio. Walter Jennings was commissioned by the California sportsman to go abroad for racing stock and for one season, while racing in this country, Macomber was at the top of the owners list.

Hellebore, a gray, was a true running mare and was one of the most popular performers at Tanforan some time ago.

Although W. R. Coe will sell eighty-nine horses in November, he still has nine in training that will be brought west. Hugh Fontaine, manager of Coe's Shoshone Stud in the Blue Grass prior to the sale of the place to Mrs. M. F. Yount, of Texas, has been instructed by Coe to handle the string.

GUEST OF HONOR AT BABY SHOWER

Mrs. Ed Domenici of Mission Circle was guest of honor at a baby shower given by Mrs. Bessie Carr of Evergreen avenue at the home of Mrs. Lillian Landini of Winchester street, Friday evening of last week.

The evening was spent in playing Dutch Whist.

At 11 o'clock the guests assembled in the social hall, where Mrs. Domenici was presented with many lovely gifts, after which tempting refreshments were served.

The table was beautifully decorated in pink and blue crepe paper. The center piece consisted of a small blue silk parasol from which hung several small baby dolls tied with pink and blue ribbons.

FANS LIKE THE UMP

Dolly Stark, National league umpire, is so popular among New York baseball fans that they recently presented him with an automobile. Dolly is here seen, at left, as he accepted the gift from Ford Frick, president of the National league, who acted on behalf of Stark's admirers.

DISTRIBUTOR SQUEAK

A squeaking sound while the motor is running may often be traced to the distributor shaft.

A little vaseline or similar lubricant applied to the cam and distributor shaft will usually stop the trouble .
